

Daniel Weiss

His nickname is "Germany's voice of figure skating" and he has been active all his life. Daniel was the German figure skating champion in 1990 and 1991, and fifth at the European Championships. After an exciting professional figure skating career all over the world he started commentating for "Eurosport" and from 1996 for the German national television ARD. He is now fully dedicated to his sport coverage career at the "Hessischer Rundfunk" in Frankfurt, part of the ARD Network. In 2018 he received the National Media Award (Deutscher Medienpreis) for his exciting and professional commentary of Germany's Olympic gold medal winner in the pairs figure skating event at the Winter-Olympics in PyeongChang/South Korea. His passion of being active is in his blood and his everyday life, challenging himself with new goals in different sports.